

Drupal Association Annual Report 2011

About

The Drupal Association is a not-for-profit organization dedicated to helping the open-source Drupal CMS project flourish by providing support to the Drupal community with funding, infrastructure, events, promotion and distribution.

The main focus of the Association is to create and maintain the ever-increasing Drupal community that drives the exciting changes and additions that are continually being created to improve and grow the Drupal CMS project. The relationship is very much mutual - Drupal community makes up the Association and the Association supports the community. The Association does not directly affect the planning or development of the Drupal open source project itself.

With a multi-talented staff of full-time and contract employees, the Association continues to grow and improve the support and services available to the Drupal community.

Mission Statement

The Drupal Association fosters and supports the Drupal software project, the community and its growth.

The Drupal Association does this by:

1. Maintaining the hardware and software infrastructure of Drupal.org and other community sites.
2. Empowering the Drupal community to participate in and contribute to the project.
3. Protecting the Drupal project's GPL source code of the Drupal project and its community contributions.
4. Protecting the Drupal project and community through legal work and advocacy.
5. Organizing and promoting worldwide events.
6. Communicating the benefits of the Drupal software.

2010 was a great year for the Association. I, along with other talented folks, started the small organization over four years ago because we needed a bank account. That organization has since grown into a full fledged Association with a quickly growing staff roster. We hired our first three full-time employees in 2010 and we see that staff continuing to grow in 2011 and beyond. This is a sure sign of the legitimization of the Association and of greater things to come.

The Association was instrumental in helping to complete the redesign project and pushing forward the Git migration. The Association also helped to create and partner with DrupalCon in the hiring of full-time events management, sponsorship support and a team dedicated specifically to growing the conference, pushing the Drupal project forward and, most importantly, supporting the Drupal community.

2011 will be an amazing year for the Drupal project and I'm excited to have the Drupal Association there to support the community.

— Dries Buytaert

I downloaded my first copy of Drupal in 2005 as an experiment to replace my aging, custom CMS. The interface was drab and a bit boring, the system a little clunky and like every developer I was convinced that my code was far superior — at least I thought it was. It took a year and an account on Drupal.org before I realized the true value of Drupal: its community. I was living in New York at the time and I started hosting the first New York City Drupal group. Our first meeting had five people. In that small meeting I learned that Drupal not only has a powerful community, it also has an equally powerful API. Now I was convinced: a great API and an awesome community.

In 2007 I volunteered with the Drupal Association, initially working to help at camps around the country and world. Fast-forward three years later and we find ourselves in a flurry of growth and change. Drupal.org has undergone a redesign, Drupal 7 was released, tens of thousands of Drupal projects were migrated to the Git platform and DrupalCon has grown from a small handful of folks to thousands of dedicated Drupalers.

All of this work has been created by the community and supported by the Drupal Association, which has grown from an all-volunteer-run organization to a fully staffed organization. This change has been amazing for the Drupal project, its community, and for Open Source.

I'm excited to be a part of this change and humbled by the sheer amount of talented people that make up the Drupal community. 2011 is going to be an amazing year for Drupal. Drupal 7 will push the project to new heights and the Association is ramping up its staff and volunteer program to help support this growth.

Thank you for being a part of the Drupal project and for helping to push open source further.

— Jacob Redding

Highlights

Drupal.org Redesign

The redesign of Drupal.org was a community effort that utilized some of the talented developers from the Drupal community.

Drupal™

One of the highlights of the project was the creation of a style guide from the ground up. The redesign also used UX research to customize the user experience. This UX research indicated that Drupal.org was largely used as a search site. Armed with this information, the redesign task force made sure to include a large search index and incorporate advanced Apache Solr features.

Other new features include dashboard, a new “Getting Started” page, a newly redesigned community and support page, new module categories and a thorough review and redesign of the individual project pages. The homepage now features a showcase that allows visitors to easily view the newest and best Drupal sites along with an impressive world map and code statistics that illustrate the worldwide breadth of the Drupal community’s activity.

Migration from CVS to Git

Responding to community needs, the Drupal Association stepped in to migrate Drupal.

+++ git

org’s version control system and code distributions tools from CVS to Git, ensuring that Drupal.org remains the central repository for contributed Drupal code. Every Git repository includes a complete history and full revision tracking capability that is not dependent on network access or a central server. Developers on Drupal.org now have some of the best and greatest tools available to collaborate, share and write innovative new code.

Drupal Marketplace

The Drupal Association is always on the lookout for new ways to make the site increasingly useful for the community. Right now, the Association is in the process of creating the Drupal Marketplace. This portion of Drupal.org will create the opportunity for Drupal Service Providers to publish and categorize themselves for easy viewing.

Keeping with the community spirit, the Drupal Association turned to users for an idea of what the most important categorizations are. This effort is on-going and the Association is very much looking forward to meeting the community's needs.

Memberships

The Drupal community supports the Drupal Association through a membership program that in turn, makes it possible for the Association to create and maintain initiatives that support the Drupal community.

This model has created a flourishing Drupal ecosystem.

Anyone can become an Association member.

To join, visit: drupal.org/membership

We have two different membership options:

Individual:

For 22 euro (approximately US$30) a year, you can support the Drupal Association and watch your dollars go to fund events, programs and other activities that enable the Drupal community to grow and strengthen. As a thank you, we list your participation on your Drupal.org profile and the Association website.

Organization:

Organizations that want to help support the Association and show their Drupal pride can do so for only 73 euro (roughly US$100). This contribution provides many promotional and networking opportunities while helping to pay for the infrastructure needed to keep the project alive. Membership benefits include subscription to a bi-monthly newsletter, advertising, a Drupal.org profile page, early notice on upcoming programs, access to the Drupal.org Marketplace and connections throughout the community.

Be on the look out for other membership programs in 2011.

People of the Drupal

Staff

❖ Jacob Redding, Executive Director

Jacob combines his expertise in internet technologies (specifically open source) and background in finance in his Drupal Association responsibilities. These responsibilities include overseeing all worldwide activities to support and foster the growth of the Drupal open source software project as well as managing three worldwide conferences, multiple software projects and growing the staff of the organization to meet the needs of the Drupal software development and business community.

❖ Megan Sanicki, Sponsor Wrangler

Megan combines her love of software sales and community service in order to foster the business community and raise capital for the Drupal Community.

❖ Neil Kent, Events Manager

Neil joined the Drupal Association team to help create “moments” — as he’s been doing since 1989. Neil produces events that are built around a results oriented environment that is conducive to learning and has brought his knack for creating events that “fit” — whether they’re elegant receptions or raucous bashes — to the Drupal Association. Neil works tirelessly to put together DrupalCon events that are always a hit.
